The Gallegos Corporation was recently honored for the fireplace it created from Colorado buff sandstone at the Sanctuary Golf Course in Sedalia, Colorado. Masonry Construction Magazine awarded The Gallegos Corporation winner for the Best Fireplace category.

Rick Yelton, editor of Masonry Construction, says, "We are not trying to impress architects and owners on how pretty a building looks. We have selected projects in which the mason contractor used his mind as well as his technical skills."

The stone veneer is highly detailed with cleft and snapped face Colorado buff sandstone. The 9-inch thick hearths had to be set in place before framing closed off access to the area.

"I am very pleased to have our company receive this award," says Gerald Gallegos, founder and CEO. "Because this venue is used for numerous charitable events, it made the project that much more special for us. Our construction schedule was tight but the finished product shows true masonry craftsmanship."

In addition to the stonework, The Gallegos Corporation also completed the decorative concrete work, stucco and art rock water features.

The Gallegos Corporation was founded in 1970 by Gerald G. Gallegos as a specialty stone masonry company. In 1980, The Gallegos Corporation was integral in building the village of Beaver Creek. Since that time, TGC has expanded trades and now also specializes in distinctive residential and commercial projects including quality plaster/stucco, concrete/decorative concrete, marble/granite work and stone sales.

The Gallegos Corporation is headquartered in Vail, Colorado and has offices in Denver, Telluride, Aspen; Sun Valley, Idaho, as well Lake Tahoe, California and Bozeman, Montana.
